U.S. Secret Service National Threat Assessment Center and the Regional Office of Education 45 invite you to attend:

Enhancing School Safety Using a Threat Assessment Model & Aligning Behavioral Threat Assessment and Management with a Multi-Tiered System of Support: Building a Continuum of Prevention and Intervention

For over 25 years, the U.S. Secret Service National Threat Assessment Center (NTAC) has conducted research on the thinking and behaviors of current and recently former students who commit acts of targeted school violence in an effort to prevent future tragedies. Key findings from this research indicate these devastating incidents of violence are preventable.

The first presentation will highlight past incidents as well as relevant implications and recommendations from NTAC's latest research on targeted school violence and interrupted school plots in the United States. It will also focus on how schools and communities can use a multidisciplinary approach to identify, assess, and intervene with students exhibiting concerning or threatening behaviors as early as possible.

The second presentation will highlight how behavioral threat assessment and management (BTAM) is intended to support student needs before they escalate into acts of school violence or other crisis requiring law enforcement intervention or medical personnel. Multi-Tiered Systems of Support (MTSS) like Positive Behavioral Interventions and Supports (PBIS) can provide a framework for a BTAM team to extend options for prevention and intervention by working in conjunction with a broader system designed to provide access to proactive and early intervention for students needing support.
